

JAVAS

Javas are one of the earliest breeds known in the United States. It is not an American-made breed, but came from the Isle of Java in the East Indies in 1835.

Javas are a general purpose fowl for the production of meat and eggs. The skin is yellow and the egg shells are brown.